

Garlic

Garlics can be cultivated in several parts of the world. The largest producer of garlics is China, followed by India. As for Thailand, garlic cultivation can be done in almost every region, however, it is best done in lower temperature for a period of several months. Therefore, most of garlic farming areas in Thailand is in the Northern and North-Eastern regions. Thai garlics are marked by their strong yet pleasant aroma and taste; they are widely used in cooking to season the food. Chinese garlics are in term of quantity and physical appearance suitable for food industry. They are either used raw such as peeled garlics, or processed such as garlic powder, fried garlic.
